

Twisted titles

The clue leads to a famous book whose title has been changed by one letter.

*Example: Tolkien was in a fender bender and sent his car to this, the best panel beater in Middle Earth:
"The Lord of the Dings"*

Good luck!

1. E. B. White's tale of a Bronte sister who falls into the village pond trying to save a pig:
2. Emily Bronte writes about the effects of mountaintop removal:
3. After many, many failed attempts, Joseph Heller finally makes perfect muffins:
4. Arthur Conan Doyle's famous detective investigates the animal shelter of a cursed family:
5. Kenneth Grahame spends his days drinking on the banks of the river, dreaming of talking toads and badgers:
6. William Golding's boys grab a conch shell in the hopes of winning this title at McDonald's:
7. Suzanne Collins' post-apocalyptic story about a young woman can't reorganize her closet to save her life:
8. Laura Ingalls Wilder's story of life on the western frontier as seen through a hole in the baseboard:
9. Jack Kerouac's elegy to warts:
10. Jack London describes what people with an aversion to spicy food experience:
11. Roald Dahl's narration of the epic journey of a young entomologist ends with sand as far as the eye can see:
12. The first – or last – volume in Frank Herbert's epic sci-fi series:

13. A children's book about the chaos which ensues when a diminutive figure asks for Han Solo's hairy companion:
14. John Irving says this device for listening to records is no consolation for losing your mother in a tragic baseball accident:
15. Ernest Hemingway's pensioner who is unable to get a good night's sleep on a princess's bed:
16. Richard Adams' story begins at sunrise above the rabbit warren:
17. Joel Osteen pens a Muppet's guide to self-actualization:
18. Ian Fleming's famous spy stars in an Eastern European soap opera:
19. Margaret Mitchell's US Civil War epic, featuring the memorable line, "Frankly my dear, I no longer suffer from indigestion.":
20. Anna Sewell's beloved story of the adventures of a lazy horse:
21. Dr Seuss is surprised that the young lad does, in fact, like dairy products and preserves:
22. Dostoevsky narrates the consequences for not practicing personal hygiene in nineteenth century Russia:
23. Socially awkward Philip Pullman obsesses over his sci-fi collectibles, which include a knife, a telescope and a compass:
24. Miguel de Cervantes tale of the German who tilted at windmills:
25. Herman Melville's epic about a famous DJ who moves to the country: